Eve Zelickson
DLI Visiting Researcher

Biography
Eve Zelickson studies issues at the intersection of technology, labor, and privacy. She is currently a Visiting Journalist at Cornell Tech's Digital Life Initiative and a research assistant with the Social Instabilities in Labor Futures Team at Data & Society. Prior to joining Cornell Tech, Eve worked as a Social Researcher for the EU-funded project P2P Models, exploring how decentralized technology can create a worker-centric collaborative economy. Eve received her bachelors from Brown University with a degree in Science, Technology, and Society where she completed her honors thesis “A Balancing Act: Hybrid Organizations in the Collaborative Economy Empirical Evidence from Amara on Demand.”

Linkedin >